MINUTES OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
CONCERNING CLOSING ACCOUNTS AT THE 67TH SESSION OF THE IMPERIAL DIET.
1 MARCH 1935.

Answer of the Minister of State.
Minister of State Hirota.

At present, the Japanese Government is officially negotiating with the Nanking Government. Whether their influence actually extends over all the territory of China or not is a serious problem of Chinese internal affairs. However, if this internal situation is taken into account, considered in the light of past experience, it can be said that there would be no way of dealing with China. There may occur some incidents in the future making it necessary for the Japanese Government to negotiate with the local governments. However, at present I intend to make it the Japanese policy towards China to improve the general relations between them through negotiations with the Nanking Government, which has been recognized by foreign countries.

can be accomplished to a great extent if it is done in the right way. I think, in order to achieve a basic understanding, the Chinese will naturally make demands to make. We will be ready to listen to them. On the other hand, Japan has also many demands to make on this matter I intend to carry on full negotiations.

MINUTES OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVE ON THE NORTH CHINA INCIDENT SPECIAL TAX BILL AT THE 71ST SESSION OF THE IMPERIAL DIET. 5 AUGUST 1937

Answer of the Minister of State.
Minister of State Hirota.

I believe there is not much disagreement in this fundamental idea, not only among the Japanese people but also among the Chinese people, that, in view of the position of Japan and China in the Far East, the best policy for the two countries would be to cooperate to the mutual benefit. In spite of this, because of the proximity of the two countries various problems have arisen and for that reason the real mutual feelings have not come to the forefront; rather, the situation has progressed in the opposite direction.

In order to improve Sino-Japanese relations I have presented to China three-item principles and China has come to understand the purport of the principles, but in the meantime many problems came up and the Conference was unavoidably closed without reaching a complete understanding.

Again, surveying the internal situation of China, I find that besides general anti-Japanese opinion, there is another grave influence working in China; that is, the Communist movement, which has infiltrated into China and has been working in many ways. It had some connection with the Manchurian Incident and is connected with other questions. I think it is also getting more influential.

Within China there is a desire to come to a proper understanding with Japan. I think the fact that Chiang Kai Shek, central figure among the leaders in Nanking, should be held captive at Sian is a plain indication of the Chinese internal situation. At that time Chiang sent an emissary to me to explain his standpoint and that strongly anti-Japanese Communist members or former Northeastern Army members had placed him in that awkward position; that to bring about a settlement is requiring great effort on Chiang's part and, therefore, it was requested that Japan should take a sympathetic attitude towards his position. To this I replied that if Chiang is in such a position Japan would, of course, sympathize with him; that although there seems to have been some Chinese who suspect that Japan will take advantage of this situation by taking action against China, I told him that Japan would never do such a thing and, above all, wanted to take such a course as would enable Chiang to carry out the policy of cooperation with Japan according to his own judgment. Further, I expressed my wish that should Chiang find himself in an emergency, he should convey fully his real intention to me.

I do not think that the whole of China would persist in an anti-Japanese and resist-Japan policy. I believe that if there is a way to suppress the rabid anti-Japanese masses, an understanding between Japan and China can be realized. Indeed, two or three leaders out of many intelligent Chinese who recognized the real motives of Japan and were engaging in negotiations for the promotion of friendly relations between the two countries, were unfortunately assassinated and such a man as Wang Ching Wei narrowly escaped assassination.

I still believe that an understanding with those enlightened people can be accomplished to a great extent if it is done in the right way. I think, in order to achieve a basic understanding, the Chinese will naturally make demands to make. We will be ready to listen to them. On the other hand, Japan has also many demands to make on this matter I intend to carry on full negotiations.
